"Dr. D. Lawrence - Sydney 2006: In the first major work that considers the importance of childhood representations in shaping the modern writer, Lawrence uncovers the "richness of possibility" that Dr. D. Lawrence fashioned in the depiction of children and the complexities of family life. - Publisher website.

The Child's View of the Third Reich in German Literature (Critique Politique 1998-25) This book examines the ways in which German authors have used the child's perspective to present the Third Reich. It considers how children have viewed the war at a time when the youth of the Third Reich were being educated to accept Nazism. This work relies on primary sources drawn from the autobiographies of children's authors, as well as from archival sources, to provide a unique perspective on the Third Reich. This study asks whether this perspective is an evocative strategy, a means of gaining new insights into the past, or a means of discovering new language which had not been tested by Nazism. This book and sources address issues central to a post-war aesthetic in German writing.

Ardea-Doji Höfling 2006-05: One father's mission to find his daughter is a story about the child's need for identity and belonging. The search for identity and the need for personal identity are fundamental to an understanding of human behavior and psychology. This book distills the heart-wrenching story of Hatsumi, the most complete account of Naito-hen's disappearance in Ardea. Continuing his investigation in this very book, Höfling discloses the behind-the-scenes details of the investigation and reveals the corruption of the Ardea law enforcement and the criminal trials leading to possible rape, murder, and even self-murder. The book is a touching portrayal of the healing of a mother who, in the words of another book's author, "has a horror of personally seeing through rush houses and trash dumps for Naito's remains with others, even with psychos with understanding the Ardea."

Chaucer and the Child - Eva Salovich 2017-01-17 This book addresses part of the child's work in a wide array of Chaucer's works. Situated within a larger discussion on childhood, Age of Man theory, and debates about the status of the child in the late fourteenth century, Chaucer's use of the child is re-examined as it goes beyond the established division of child as 'naive, uncorrupted voice' and adult as 'corrupt, wise.' This book demonstrates how Chaucer uses the voice of the child to develop themes of innocence, love, and social commentary. Strange Dislocations
Carolyn Steedman 1995 Using the perspectives of social and cultural history, and the history of psychology and physiology, Strange Dislocations traces a search for the self, for a past that is lost and gone, and the ways in which, over the last hundred years, the loss vision has come to assume the form of a child.

Dimensions of monstrousity in Contemporary Narrative
J. Ng 2004-09-14 Interweaving psychoanalysis, gender and cultural studies, and postmodern theories of possession, this study of the monster in contemporary narratives demonstrates that the monster (and monstrosity) is largely a cultural and ideological production. Figures such as the serial-killer, the monstrous child, deformed bodies and spatially-influenced monstrosity will be considered through analyses of texts by Peter Ackroyd, Bret Easton Ellis, and Angela Carter (among others). The conclusion proposes that language itself becomes monstrous when it attempts, and fails, to articulate the monster.

The Spanish Civil War in Literature
Janet W. Peters 1983 Two events have stirred the emotions and caught the imaginations of intellectuals as did the Spanish Civil War of 1936-39. The Spanish Civil War in Literature examines the diverse literatures that the war inspired, a literature relating directly to the war, a literature of exile arising from the forty-year dictatorship of Francisco Fran~ces, and a postwar literature lamenting post-Franco and Lyndon Johnson. In this book, specialists from a variety of fields explore these literatures within comparative and interdisciplinary frameworks. They reflect upon films, poetry, novels, painting, dance, biography, and propaganda. The essays are grouped according to the original languages of the works they discuss. French, Russian, English, and Spanish.

Children of Paradise
Fred D'Aguiar 2014-02-18 A novel set in 1930s London, a place where the rich and poor, criminals and the law, can all live in the same kind of world. It is about a group of people who, through their actions, create a new world that is their own. It is about the power of the human spirit, and the ability to transform the world.

Great Expectations
Charles Dickens 1860-10-26 A classic novel that tells the story of a young boy named Pip, who is raised by his kindhearted but poor family. Pip is sent to London to become a gentleman, but he is forced to confront the harsh realities of life, and he learns that true happiness comes from helping others.

No Hunger In Paradise
Michael Calvin 2017-04-20 Shortlisted for the British Sports Book Awards 2018 "What's your dream, son?" A six year-old boy, head bowed, murmurs the eternal question. "Be a footballer..." Steve Martin, football's most unlikely talent scout, smiles indulgently, and takes him in from the street. He knows the odds. Only 1 in 2.5 million boys who play organized youth football in England will become a Premier League pro. That's a success rate of 0.04% per year. How and why do the few succeed and the many fail? What separates the good from the great? Who should they trust - the coach, the agent or their parents? Michael Calvin provides the answers on a journey from non-league grounds to hallowed grounds of Premier League duels, via gang-controlled sink estates and the England team's inner sanctum. He interviews decision makers, behavioural specialists, football agents and hunting coaches. He shares the hopes and fears of players and their parents. He exposes bullying and a black economy in which children are commodities, but remains true to the dream.

The Last Moon-Delmas Labeled 2018-09-14 On May 8, 1902, Mount Pelee on the West Indies island of Martinique near the seaport town of St. Pierre erupted in a cloud of gas and fire in one of the most awesome and destructive pyrotechnic displays ever offered by nature. Four minutes later, thirty thousand citizens lay dead or dying and the town was engulfed in flames. Neither science nor art nor the human spirit could have been prepared for the horror that followed. The Last Moon remains a testament to the human spirit and the human condition.
